My only friend

Hearty thanks for your amiable lines that make me happy by the promise of a soon meeting - I regret you have so great a many of business and regret also very much, Eliza's sickness - my best compliments to them. I am really living in a paradise, but - poor Eve - is lately - what to do -

I hope I will regain here my health and humour and forget all bad and sad hours - my sweet child is much better, nothing but sleeping, drinking, laughing - I think, the arms will be perfectly well in a few days.

As you wish it my Dear, I will speak to the hostess in my neighbourhood but I must assure, I can at first it so expensive in the curhouse, we have now a very good supper so much the cook sends - and some perfectly made; afterwards when Fredy will be here, I don't want by no means more than we have now, ergo, Dearest, for three persons £ 20. No hostess can send for forty sh. a better and proper dinner - will you perhaps reflect this my love before situation changes? —

My landlord is proprietor of a bath of 26-27 Degrees - as soon as possible I intend trying it - only distant ten minutes. Yesterday, it was so hot, that I was absented remaining half the Day in my little room; to-day, it is cool and raining. Could you see in this very moment our baby - what a sing-song! How amiable cybavagant! - Hope, my Beauty, will also be in health in spirits.

I long for a fine promenade with you in the mountains, and shall in the mean while enjoy myself with the "idea" -

My compliments to all friends.

This lines, the last for this week, hoping, and wishing, to be soon surprised —

A kiss for Fredy; I embrace you Dear Lewis.

Ever yours Mela.

Thursday.
